About the Journal

The Quill: An Inter-disciplinary Journal of Humanities and Social Sciences is a literary endeavour of Pub Kamrup College, Baihata Chariali, Assam, to bring out a compilation of scholarly articles and book reviews on issues pertaining to humanities and social sciences. The journal will be refereed and blind peer-reviewed and aims to promote interdisciplinary research. The fundamental goal of this journal is to encourage cross cultural explorations and subsequent innovation in academia through diversified research and learning.

Scholars/ Faculties/ Independent researchers are solicited to contribute to the journal. We look forward for your scholarly inputs and deliberations. We are including a wide range of areas, which is suggestive and not exclusive, for the first issue of our journal:

- Gender and Identity
- Identity and Ethnicity
- Translation studies
- Violence and Body
- Children's Literature
- India's North-east
- Diasporic literature
- AI (Artificial Intelligence) and Ethics
- Eco-criticism
- Religion and Spirituality
- Any other topic

Editor's note

The Quill: An Inter-disciplinary Journal of Humanities and Social Sciences has been envisioned by the teaching fraternity of Pub Kamrup College to provide a literary space for initiating dialogue and discussions across varied themes. Interdisciplinary scholarship in recent years has steadily increased and this wave of interest has its roots in the American Civil War. Most of the literary mega-minds and academicians had stressed on why literature shouldn't be rigid or put into traditional categories. It is almost impossible to understand political history without reading popular literature or to understand attitudes, prejudices, phobias without exploring what lies outside of our pre-set and hardened opinions and viewpoints. Most of the authors, in the present socio-literary context, have worked incessantly to make the "inter" of "inter-disciplinary" mean "together with", in a joining of literary, social, political, and historical concerns. Keeping in mind that inter-disciplinarity is a practical more often than theoretical choice, the first issue of our journal aims to open up the pedagogical canon to formulate research questions that have been neglected in the past, turning to methods—whether within our discipline or outside it—that help provide adequate, interesting answers.

Disclaimer: All the opinions and statistical data provided in the articles solely belong to the authors.
